International Parenting Programme: online & exchange cooperation on parenting

Zuyd University, Goossens ©2014

The International Parenting Programme (IPP) aims to strengthen competences to enable a parent-centred approach in professional contexts. The IPP will deconstruct the current deficit-oriented approaches of professionals working with parents and will help to build up an intercultural alternative, transformative and collaborative visions of parental engagement: a parent-centred approach. The project goes further than just building new learning contents: through this project and its didactical approach focusing on comparative learning, the partners integrate the IPP in their curriculum, enriching them with the best practices from six different countries. In a current historically troubled moment, promoters of social sustainability, empowerment, and social cohesion are increasingly focusing on families and parenthood as viable channels of learning, growth, stability and development.

The International Parenting Programme (IPP) aims to strengthen competences to enable a parent-centred approach in professional contexts. The IPP will deconstruct the current deficit-oriented approaches of professionals working with parents and will help to build up an intercultural alternative, transformative and collaborative visions of parental engagement: a parent-centred approach. The project goes further than just building new learning contents: through this project and its didactical approach focusing on comparative learning, the partners integrate the IPP in their curriculum, enriching them with the best practices from six different countries. In a current historically troubled moment, promoters of social sustainability, empowerment, and social cohesion are increasingly focusing on families and parenthood as viable channels of learning, growth, stability and development.

However, in contemporary multicultural Europe, a merely national approach is not sufficient. It is essential for lecturers, pre- and in-service professionals to be aware of European developments and various perspectives and to view parent-centred approaches through a multi perspective lens. Therefore, this IPP proposes to strengthen competences of lecturers and pre- and in-service professionals in parent-centred

Project Deliverables

- Migrated LMS
- Zuyd Course Templates
- 4 Business rules
 1. The structure of educational units (EU) in the SIS is copied to the LMS;
 2. Enrolling in an EU = enrolling in a LMS course;
 3. LMS courses are deleted 3 years after end date;
 4. Users are deleted, 60 days after leaving Zuyd University.

LMS today & tomorrow

What	Blackboard	Moodle
Courses	44,000	3,743
Users	112,000	29,870
Storage	1.7 TB	0.9 TB

1. Use institutions, groups and templates in Mahara;
2. Use competency frameworks and learning plans;
3. BR 3 and 4: Create procedures to remove unused courses and useraccounts.

All this will lead to a better LMS and thus to more succesful students
